

From his early days as an Emergency Medical Technician to his decades of service as a Disaster Response Coordinator, Joe has devoted his life to caring for people when they need it most.

His journey began on the front lines of emergencies, where compassion and calm meant everything. Over the years, Joe became an American Red Cross Disaster Services Coordinator and earned his certification as a Disaster Response Coordinator, teaching many of the same FEMA and Red Cross courses that shaped his own career. Through this work, he's helped train countless responders and volunteers who now serve communities across the country. Joe's experience extends well beyond classrooms and command posts. A U.S. Navy veteran, he's been part of 144 national disaster relief operations through FEMA and the Red Cross. As a General Class Amateur Radio Operator (Kb3poc), W5YI Volunteer Examiner, and ARRL Technical Instructor, Joe bridges communication when it matters most ensuring that even when the world goes silent, people can still reach out for help. His MARS radio call sign, AAR3MR, stands as a reminder of his continuous service to his country and community.

Today, Joe is honored to lead as the President of Heaven Sent Community Services and Veterans Assistance, where his mission is simple but powerful: to serve those who have served, and to bring hope to families rebuilding after crisis. Whether through disaster relief, veteran assistance, or community outreach, Joe's leadership is rooted in compassion, faith, and service.

At home, Joe draws his greatest strength from his family — his beloved wife, whom he proudly calls his queen, and their two wonderful children, a great and smart artistic son and a smart and wonderful daughter . They are his heart, his inspiration, and the reason he continues to give everything he can to make the world a better, safer place.
